

ALPS OutdoorZ Renegade Compression Stuff Sacks

New Haven, Mo. - ALPS OutdoorZ, premiere manufacturer of extreme-duty hunting packs and gear for big-game hunters, has developed a new product that solves a real problem for backcountry adventurers—keeping gear dry. The new ALPS OutdoorZ Renegade X is a compression stuff sack that is also waterproof, providing a lightweight, small-footprint solution for dry gear storage.

While many packs offer rainfly protection, the ability to keep gear with high moisture-absorbing or wicking potential—such as clothing and sleeping bags—from getting wet often demands dedicated waterproof storage. The problem with many dry bags is that they tend to be heavy and bulky, and few can sufficiently compress a bag's contents. The Renegade X solves both these problems.

Made of 70D ripstop nylon with a durable waterproof coating, the Renegade X is built for the rigors of the backcountry. Waterproof taped seams combine with tough nylon webbing and bartacked stress points to withstand compression forces. The Renegade X features a rolltop with snap buckle closure similar to conventional dry bags plus cinch straps for maximum compression and minimal space requirement in your pack. A special Air Control waterproof breathable bottom fabric allows air to be pushed out while not allowing water in, eliminating wasted air space and ensuring optimal compression efficiency.

The Renegade X is available in four sizes, making it an ideal in-pack storage solution for clothing and sleeping bags (an item that rarely comes with a waterproof compression bag).
